LOCAL NEWS & ACTION

2009 Progress Report for the Homeless Housing and Services Fund
The 2009 Progress Report for the Homeless Housing and Services Fund (local document recording fees HB2163 and 1359) is now available. These funds were created in 2005 and 2007 by the state legislature to help communities implement the Ten Year Plan to End Homelessness. This report provides information and data on the 29 projects that were up and running prior to the end of 2008. Projects start at different times and represent awards from three funding rounds. As a result, you will see that some are further along than others. The projects are serving a variety of populations in King County and all test different housing and service strategies for helping people who are homeless secure and maintain permanent housing. The report can be found on the King County website at www.kingcounty.gov/housing.

2010 Census
Preparations are under way to ensure every resident of Seattle is counted in the 2010 Census. Many community representatives are serving on the Seattle 2010 Complete Count Committee and are playing a critical role in helping Seattle reach communities that have been undercounted in the past. The majority of the undercounted populations in the last Census were people of color, immigrants and refugees, homeless people, and people with low incomes. The Census determines which states gain or lose representation in Congress and the amount of state and federal funding communities receive over the course of the decade. The 2010 Census will directly affect how more than $400 billion is allocated annually to local, state and tribal governments and will help shape decisions about future funding allocations.

If you want to help ensure that your community is counted, there are several ways to help.

- Sponsor an Employment Recruitment Training Site. The Census Bureau will be hiring more than 1,400 community people to work as "enumerators." Let us know if you have space available in your facility and can sponsor some enumerator testing sessions.
- Sponsor a Questionnaire Assistance Center. The Census Bureau is looking for accessible sites (a small private office) for a walk-in center that will be used to help people in completing their Census questionnaires.
- Identify 'Be Counted' Sites. Help identify public locations where people who believe they were not counted or didn't receive a Census questionnaire in the mail can pick one up.

If you're able to help, please contact Kenny Pittman, Office of Policy and Management, at 206-684-8364 or kenny.pittman@seattle.gov or Beverly Yapp, Seattle Human Services Department, at 206-684-0117 or beverly.yapp@seattle.gov.

Recent Meeting: November 2, 2009
Katy Miller, KC Department of Community and Human Services, provided a review of the HHSF 2009 Progress Report that was recently presented to the King County Council. You are also able to view it online: www.kingcounty.gov/housing.

Bill Block, Project Director for CEH relayed information about the Hansen Dam Flood planning, specifically around sustaining people who are homeless in the Kent Valley. When possible, please raise the alert to those involved in emergency management in your areas to provide information on staging areas now.

Debbi Knowles, KC DCHS presented on the King County Family Homelessness Project (Gates Funded Initiative), specifically on the Housing Stabilization model. As background, the first stage of the King County Family Homelessness project is the landscape assessment, currently 100 pages long, which will be synthesized and widely distributed once it is complete. All the work builds on the Ten-Year plan strategies, drawing on current systems that are in place. They are now developing the strategic plan that identifies specific strategies for filling the gaps and enhancing the systems identified in the first phase. Once the Plan is approved by the Gates Foundation, additional resources will be made available to help pay for the costs associated with bringing about the improved system changes identified in the Plan.

Housing Stabilization Model: To begin, families enter the system through a common point of entry and assessment or through an array of community members as a result of outreach/prevention efforts. Stabilization services would be provided whether families come in through the common point of entry or through outreach/prevention efforts – before they are homeless.

The plan is to use knowledgeable, well trained, culturally competent intake specialists to assess each family’s housing and service needs to determine the level of housing crisis they are experiencing. Those who are determined to be at a low risk of homelessness are linked to the appropriate community and mainstream services for assistance and do not enter the housing stabilization system. Those who are deemed at a high-risk of homelessness or are already homeless are quickly connected to an appropriate agency within the housing stabilization system for help.

The Funders Group Coordinated Entry for Families workgroup, which works closely with and shares workgroup members from the King County Family Homelessness workgroup, meets on a weekly basis and is pulling together the process flow and assessment tool for coordinated entry. The coordinated entry system will build on an existing infrastructure, like 211, where the initial intake assessment would occur. If enough “red flags” are raised in the initial 211 assessment, families will be set up with an appointment at a regionally considerate HUB, co-located in an existing agency, where another trained intake specialist will work with them through the next level of intake assessment.

Several Rapid-Re-housing demonstration projects funded by HPRP Stimulus funds from the County and City of Seattle and currently underway will use the newly developed assessment tool. Lessons learned from the use of the assessment tool with these projects will then be built into the final assessment tool for the King County Family Homelessness project. The Funders Group Coordinated Entry for Families workgroup will provide a proposed final plan by the end of the year.

All families, regardless of how they are assessed, are connected with a “housing stability” case manager working at one of the participating service agencies. This case manager works with the family to develop a plan for housing stabilization. Families that are at-risk of homelessness are provided with the appropriate level of assistance to remain housed or assisted to find a more stable housing situation. Families who are homeless or at imminent risk of becoming homeless are assisted to access non-time limited stable housing. In these situations, “housing search” specialists may work with the case manager and family to perform housing search and other related duties – with the ultimate goal, regardless of magnitude of intervention, to help families stabilize their housing. Stable housing includes: subsidized housing with or without services, non-subsidized housing with or without services, and permanent supportive housing. Interim housing is also an option if it fits the specific needs of the family. Again, the goal is to have a flexible system that provides the support and services that are needed to stabilize a family.

Housing stability case management is responsive to each family’s needs and ebbs and flows during times of challenge and stability. It also connects families to additional community and mainstream support services that help them to maintain housing stability. Stable families that are seeking increased economic self-sufficiency are supported to connect with mainstream economic self-sufficiency services systems.

HMIS
The compliance status based on data input into Safe Harbors from January to September 24, 2009 shows: 84% of Emergency Shelter, 100% Safe Havens, 84% Transitional Housing, 60% of Permanent Supportive Housing data has been collected. The “Percent of Selected Data Collected by Program” report is generated monthly and sent to agencies to review and validate. It includes demographic data only and there are some challenges around the Data Integration agency numbers that are currently being worked. Though the percent of data collected is significantly improving, there is still a great deal of work to be done in the area of data quality. Safe Harbors will be working with agencies to make these improvements and agencies are encouraged to ask for assistance where needed.

Planning for Funding Expirations
Bill Block and Cheryl Markham framed the discussion of process/priorities/and decision making around funding expirations. The discussion highlighted the complexity of the data gathering process – even to simply determine which fund sources should be included and which should not. We will use all the time we have (approximately one year until the first set of funding decisions based on expirations/renewals, will be in front of us) with great efficiency in order to be appropriately prepared.
